WAVE OF CRIME PUZZLES POLICE IN NEW YORK CITY

Four Bomb Outrages, Street Assassination and Barrel Murder Mystery Occurrences of a Few Weeks.

NEW YORK, Nov. 27.—Police of New York are facing a crime wave. In the space of a few weeks, four bomb outrages, one street assassination that smokes a Rosenthal murder, and a barrel murder mystery have taken place. The first bomb outrage occurred several weeks ago when two men and a woman, thought to be members of a white slave band extending throughout the country, partially wrecked the new Bronx County courthouse and shattered the offices of the County Sheriff.

Several days later a bomb, the fuse sputtering dangerously near the explosive, was discovered near a Judge's bench in a city Court in time to prevent damage and possible death to several persons. While the police were hunting a clue to these outrages, two men dropped a barrel on the Lower East side city. It contained the warm body of a man who had been shot through the heart.

Then came the wrecking of part of a tenement in Cherry street. Investigation revealed that the place had been occupied by a Sicilian "club." In one of the rooms was found enough explosives to have blown the six-story tenement to bits. Two injured men and a third man who was adding them were arrested in one of the wrecked rooms.

One day later Barnett Baff, whose fight against the poultry trust resulted in the conviction and sentencing to jail of 13 of his members, was lured from his office and shot to death in a crowded street. His two murderers escaped in an automobile.

The latest bomb explosion occurred late yesterday. A man who said his name was Tony Lollo was carrying a bundle along East 11th street when the "bundle" exploded, ripping away two of Lollo's fingers. It was a dynamite bomb. The police are certain Lollo can be connected with New York's bomb planters.

Coudrey, who formerly represented the 12th Missouri District in Congress, was brought to this city last night by the police on a warrant obtained by F. H. Ross, insurance broker, 100 William street, New York. Ross alleged that on December 1, 1908, he stipulated to Coudrey, who had an office here, with directions to invest in stock of the International Fire Insurance Company. It was a dynamite bomb. The police are certain Lollo can be connected with New York's bomb planters.

They extinguished the flames and notified the Wilmington police and Coroner. The police at once got into communication with Virginia authorities in hope of learning the name of the holder of the license and ascertain in that way who the victim of the accident was.

POSTBAG FROM BATTLE FRONT

First-hand Accounts of Land and Sea Conflicts Told by the Fighting Soldiers and Sailors Themselves.

[The real war correspondents of the present European struggle are the men who are in the trenches and the men on the battle ships. Professional writers are not permitted at the front. They know it when they can glean the truth from the wounded and the living. The Evening Ledger will print from time to time the only intimate side of the war—the reflections of soldiers and sailors in their letters home. German letters, when obtainable, as well as those of the Allies, will be printed.]

In Pursuit of the Emden

George Allan writes to his mother from the H. M. S. Hampshire, in pursuit of the Emden. We are chasing the German cruiser Emden. She has been up to her games in the Bay of Bengal—sunk a collier and a tramp. We are going to Calcutta and Rangoon afterwards.

We are itching to smash something German, either a town or a ship; we are not particular what it is, so long as it's German. We have just left Port Blair (September 19), a delightful little place in the Andaman Islands, where there is a big Indian penal settlement. We haven't met any of the Hoogly, but they are French and are now making for Madras, where we expect to call. I have not put foot ashore for two months—not since we left Hakodate, in Japan.

We have come half around Asia after the Emden. It is a stern chase, therefore, a long one, but we all feel confident of catching her. She has done enough damage already.

Sept. six we have heard that she has been sighted near Calcutta. We were after her still. 20th—Just as we were nearing Madras we had information that the enemy was in the neighborhood of a French merchant steamer. So we made all possible speed to catch her, only to find that she had left two hours before our arrival. So we are now carrying on to Colombo.

This Emden has certainly succeeded in dodging us, but she won't dodge much longer. She's wanted. We are going to get her. We'll be waiting for her when she will have to ease down, and we stand a chance of catching her. We need taken.

Without arms, we were exposed to the savage fury of the maltreated natives, to this city last night by the police on a warrant obtained by F. H. Ross, insurance broker, 100 William street, New York. Ross alleged that on December 1, 1908, he stipulated to Coudrey, who had an office here, with directions to invest in stock of the International Fire Insurance Company. It was a dynamite bomb. The police are certain Lollo can be connected with New York's bomb planters.

Hard Work for "Rookies"

Letter from a recruit in the British army now in training. We have been training now for practically six weeks and are gradually being fitted into shape, so as to be ready for any call which may be made on us. This week we had our first taste of wet weather, and a few unfortunates caught for one or two recruits who have not been supplied with uniforms yet got wet through while out routine marching, and, having no change, they were obliged to attend roll call in pajamas and blankets. It's wonderful the spirit of good comradeship existing between everybody.

For example, in one room of an empty house are billeted two men—one a son of a wealthy city man whose name is well known in financial circles. The other a poor mechanic who lost his job owing to the war. Occasionally a luxurious motorcar draws up at that house. The wealthy man's chauffeur has been invited to dine with the other two. BOY HUNTER KILLS BROTHER

New Jersey Youth Victim of Thanksgiving Accident. SMITHTOWN, N. J., Nov. 27.—Vander Elter, aged 13, was instantly killed yesterday by the accidental discharge of his brother's shotgun in the woods near their home.

The boys, after their Thanksgiving dinner, left a merry home party on the chance that the night would be able to raise a pheasant or two. They were beating through the brush when the trigger of the weapon caught in a twig, the resulting discharge striking Vander in the neck. After an inquiry the officials declared there would be no prosecution.

LOSS OF BATTLESHIP STARTS BRITISH CRY 'SPY AND SUBMARINE'

Bulwark Disaster Inquiry Begun—Theory Advanced That Dropping of Lyddite Shell Caused Wreck.

LONDON, Nov. 27.—Secret inquiry was started today into the blowing up of the battleship Bulwark off Sheerness yesterday, when 750 officers and men were lost. Naval experts are totally unable to explain the destruction of the Bulwark upon the theory that the explosion was accidental, unless it was caused by deterioration of the Lyddite shells. It is considered most unlikely because of the frequent tests made aboard the ship and the fact that the Bulwark's magazines were protected by all latest devices.

A theory advanced here is that the disaster resulted from the bursting of a Lyddite shell that was dropped while the warship was taking on ammunition. Some officials believe that in a moment of carelessness the men carrying the 12-inch shell permitted it to drop in the magazine.

The spy and the submarine terror ran rampant in London today. The contention of the Admiralty that the explosion was certainly internal has by no means satisfied the public. Some of the papers criticize the authorities for the lack of vigilance about the Government docks. All London has been wild upon the subject of spies for months, and it is insisted that German agents would have little trouble operating in some of the shipyards.

It is believed that the destruction of the Bulwark will go down in history as a great mystery as the blowing up of the United States battleship Maine in Havana Harbor. At the time of the disaster most of the men were below at breakfast, and only the few on deck had the slightest chance of life. A well-known shipbuilder, who was in his house near the Bulwark at the time, said that his whole house reeled under the force of the explosion and everything seemed to rattle.

No evil significance was attached at first at Sheerness to the explosion, accustomed as it is to heavy gunfire. Not until a couple of hours later was the truth known, but even then the full extent of the disaster was not realized. A member of the crew of the collier lying near the Bulwark gives the following story of the disaster: "I was on deck when suddenly I heard a most tremendous explosion and at the same time saw a sheet of red flame shoot up. Then there was a dense volume of black smoke, and as that cleared away there was simply nothing—just a gap between the other warships."

DEACONESSES AS NURSES IMPRISONED FOR LOOTING

Nine German Women Sentenced to French Jail. PARIS, Nov. 27.—The permanent court-martial sentenced Surgeon Major Collins and Wolfhart, who were in charge of the principal field hospital of the 1st German Army Corps, to a year's imprisonment today for alleged pillage.

Nine deaconesses attached to the hospital were given sentences varying from one month to three months, and 23 subordinate sentences ranging from one month to three years on the same charge. Eleven other persons connected with the hospital were acquitted.

The hospital was captured by the French at Besnon, September 15. The bulk of the baggage aroused the suspicion of the French army officials, and its search was ordered. In that of Surgeon Major Collins, it was charged, there were found three Tanagra statuettes with the Peronne Museum labels on them. It was alleged that in the baggage of the deaconesses were pieces of silk, carpets and fur linens which the deaconesses said had been given them by Carmelite Sisters in appreciation of their kindness to the French wounded.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—Although four naval tugs labored from 3 o'clock on to free the battleship Michigan from her fast position in the mud in the Horseshoe of Cape Henry, Va., she was still aground this forenoon, according to Navy department advices.

Officials, however, believe she could be floated without further difficulty.
